Concept

The drive behind Venus is to help women become educated on their bodies. Women have fought and protested for decades to be able to have access to the healthcare. Everyone's health journey and goals are different, so offering an array of services in one location is meant to make the users health journey easier and more convenient.

The women's health centre in which I am designing is being designed for all women who feel the need or want to use the services provided. It is meant to encourage women to become more in tune with their bodies and minds in a safe space, free of judgment. The centre will provide spaces for all ages of women. This means educating young girls on puberty, helping women who want to become pregnant, postpartum care, menopausal support, and more. It also aims to attract women who are simply looking for a new hobby or community to be apart of. There is also opportunity to provide a safe space for women of all backgrounds, no matter religious beliefs, sexual orientation, race, or economic standing.

Parti

The parti is the shape of a women's body. Our bodies are all different, with curves of all shapes and sizes. This is reflected in the design in many ways, including curved partitions and ceiling features. It is also portrayed through the furnishings and finishes.
